The strike of the freight handlers came so suddenly that the officials were not trepared for it, they say. There was perishable freight to be cared for, and it is fact that several swell-known railroad officials, who seldom leave their desks, took up the pencil and the tally sheet and did clerical work, while the clerks pushed a truck.

Even Superintendent Tracy W. Niles, of the Lake Shore, was seen by his friends on Wednesday, it is said, behind one of the trucks, handling some perishable freight.
The Nickel Plate car repairers and yardmen returned to work this morning, following the example of the New York Central men. The officials agreed to the terms fixed by the New York Central Railroad. The Erie is still hanging out for the piece-work system, and the Lackawanna wants a graduating scale in force. The head officials of the Lehigh Valley and Western New York and Pennsylvania and Western New York and Pennsylvania railroads are yet to be heard from on the Dewey's Significant Remark at a St.

Louis Luncheon.

ST. LOUIS, May 5.—At the luncheon at the University Club yesterday Admiral Dewey made the following significant remark:

"We can whip any nation in the work, except England, and England is our best friend."

For a moment there was an impressive silence as the full import of these words were felt, and then the assemblage broke into loud hurrahs. Rising to his feet, we were constantly receiving the signals. I may mention that all important messages were sent in code, as the enemy had an ample staff of skilled signalers, and showed, by making a free use of the heliograph themselves, that they could read our ordinary signals. The Boer signaling staff frequently flashed chaffing messages into Kimberley. Head Commandant Wessels message to Mr. Rhodes that he would meet him at the Premier Mine, and that he should expect him to bring the whisky, was brought in by a cabman who was captured by the Boers and afterward released. But caped from the operator's control last night in the South Chicago raili of the filinois Steel Company. Four men were burned, and all are likely to die.

The tar left the elevated track and plunged into a pit in which seventy-five men were working. William Mohr shouted to the men to run for their lives. All got safely out but four. Joseph Culck and Frank Salnabinski were a few seconds too late, and were struck by the molten metal and horribly burned. Both will die. Joseph Budhick and Adam Zatiar were seriously burned by iron that splashed from the floor. They may recover. Several other workmen were burned, but not seriously.
